

Since the day in 2001 when he delivered a fridge to Sydney's Nova969 resulting in him landing his first job in the entertainment industry, Paul has established himself as a TV presenter, real-estate auctioneer, voice-artist, stand-up comedian, and Master of Ceremonies.

After climbing the ranks of radio station promotions, Paul became an on-air presenter under his nickname "Fridgy". Eight years later he had presented every radio shift throughout the day and had been the regular breakfast fill-in on three different Nova Network stations in Sydney, Adelaide and Perth as well as Austereo's 2DayFM and Triple M, and also hosting several national radio shows including the famous 'Hot30 Countdown'.

Paul began his stand-up comedy career in 2007 which over the next 7 years, saw him perform across Australia supporting some of Australia's biggest acts, including live network TV appearances, and also performing at both the Melbourne and Sydney International Comedy Festivals.

Whilst slogging it out in the comedy clubs by night, Paul began to pursue his career as a voice-artist. Now a full-time voice-artist, he has been a regular promo voice for three major TV networks (Channel 10, Nine Network and ABC) and has voiced TV and radio campaigns, corporate videos and animated productions for some of the biggest brands and advertisers in the country including Subway, Coca-Cola, Hungry Jacks, Sony, Optus, Volkswagen, Arnott's and many more.

In addition to presenting in corporate videos and television commercials, Paul is an accomplished Master Of Ceremonies and hosts dozens of corporate events, festivals and functions every year. Clients include The Local Business Awards, Grad-Connection, Fairfax Media and Virgin.

In 2010, Paul joined the Nine Network as a presenter on the Today Extra Morning Show (then 'Mornings with Kerri-Anne') and continues to present advertising segments on the show every week.

Paul combined his ability to manage and entertain audiences with his love for real-estate by becoming a fully accredited auctioneer and has called hundreds of auctions around Sydney for various agencies.

As of 2019, Paul was invited to become an exclusive auctioneer for McGrath, one of Australia's most respected real-estate brands, calling auctions every week for some of Sydney's most successful agents.
